

Our Philosophy

Future food supply challenges need collaboration, engagement, communication and continuous efforts to address them effectively.

APIFP is a non-profit professional organisation that has been developed to provide Asia-Pacific food professionals with a platform to address regional food challenges. The Asia-Pacific Region faces a diversity of food-related challenges, including food security, food safety, inferior quality in health foods, and an overall shortage in its food supply. There is a strong need to develop more and better regional collaborations and cooperative arrangements. APIFP has been established to connect regional food professionals for the benefit of the public and the local food sector through education, research, training and regular engagement.
